Living in a Different Culture

People who have moved to another country often experience culture shock. This feeling comes from contact with cultural differences. People can learn about such differences in advance, and this helps them deal with culture shock effectively. Living in a different culture takes effort. However, it gives people the opportunity to become aware of different values and understand their own culture better.

Your story should begin with this sentence: One day, Jun and his parents went to the airport to pick up Bill, a student from abroad.
